No. 4. A tract of Land, bought by Thomas Mann Randolph, having thereon a Grist and Saw Mill, and containing by survey 1464 acres, besides the bed of the old mill pand; now drained by Tuckahoo Canal, which contains by survey 68 acres, and which, at a small expense of labor, might be made an excellent meadow. On about 74 acres, at the S. W. corner, Mr. Randolph has reserved a right to dig coal. This land adjoins No. 1, and was separated from it by the mill pond. A more definite line will be non-letween them before the sale, which will then be made known.

These tracts of land are contiguous to each other, the James River Canal passing through the three first, and the Tuckahoe Canal through the last. They form a body of land of great fertility, and in the highest state of improvement. Their vicinity to Richmond, being distant from ten to twelve miles, the advantages of the Canal which passes at the foot of the hills in a sintant on to do the le st possible injury, the means it affords of irigation and of a water power, there being a perpetual waste of water at two points, with the value of the coal property, make it, perhaps, the most desirable real estate that was ever offered for sale in Virginia. About 30 acres have been limed, with great benefit. The usual quantity of wheat, about 900 busiels, with preaty

Mr. Chairman: The question under consideration is one of the highest importance. Its object twofold: Compendium by Allen, p. 163—by Blair and Rives, 1st. To raise revenue for the support of the Govern. bject is unwise, inexpedient and destructive of the true laken from the Compendium, p. 358, it will be found cause it taxes the property, and not the consumption apport of Government; and thue, in an effective way, keeping the people informed of the millions collected from them for taxes. 3d. he most rapid accumulation of wealth. 10th. Because it brings into premature existence no branch of indus-try. 11th. Because it leaves every man to that occu pation or pursuit, to which his own taste or judgment may incline him; relieves the country from one source of agitation and excitement, and thus tends to strengthen and consolidate our free institutions. For these, and other reasons, which time will not allow me to enumerate, I, speaking only for myself, under a due sense of my responsibility, declare my decided preference for direct over indirect, internal over external,

I am aware, Mr. Chairman, that protection, as such, is not generally contended for. It is revenue only which gentlemen profess to desire. If this were so, why was reference made at all to the Committee on of our great articles of consumption Manufactures? Why not have referred, at once, the whole subject of duties to the Committee of Ways Cast iron, tons, and Means, the appropriate committee, as its very Bar iron, do Hardware, &c, name implies? The truth is, protection is the great object, and revenue the incident merely; inverting the legitimate powers of this Government, and making it the instrument of wrong and oppression, and not of

The dontrine that the selfshness of a man is the safest counsellor in the selection of his occupawiser and shrewder than individual man, is to prescribe for our surplus. What folly! This outrage upon the intelligence of the age is vindicated, however, upon a variety of reasons, which I will now proceed to consider.

1st Reason for Protection.

* I have a statement now before me, made at the Treasury, which shows that our nett revenue from customs, from 1830 to 1840, both inclusive, was $210,707 992, and that the expense of the collecting it was $15,160,148, which is over 71 per centum; a per centum greater than attends the collection of direct taxes, as is well known.

No. 46 .-- VOLUME XXXIX. But it is utterly impossible for any Tariff looking to revenue at all—ay, if raised to prohibition—to give us a home market. Upon examination of the census table, it appears that the number of persons engaged mechanics, white or black, slave or free. By the sobjoined statement, (we regret our inability to publish it,) that the number there stated, as engaged in mining and manufacturing, is only 473,288. Deduct from this First. By internal taxes. This mode has prevailed, to number those engaged in machinery, granite, marble, some extent, for about iwenty years of the last fifty of our Federal existence. It is recommended: 1st. Be carriages and wagons, mills and houses, (none of which subjects are imported, and which would exist, many of of the country. 2d. Because it is an honest tax, levy-ing directly, upon the people the sum necessary for the trade,) and the number sinks to 265,032 males only. This number might fairly be reduced considerably-an tobacco, for instance-the manufacture whereof is entirely unaffected by a Tariff. But take the number 265,. 032 with such wives and children as they have, and what a poor prospect do they present, of a home market for the surplus products of our 3,719,951 hardy tillers of the Why, Sir, the idea is ridiculous-supremely absurd. My colleague (Mr. Stuart) gave us a very graphic

Again: after supplying our home demand for rice, we export an annual surplus of about $2,000,000. Can a Tariff in any way consume this surplus? Again: we raise upwords of 2,000,000 of bales of cotton. Our own factories consume about 300,000.—
With a complete monopoly, they could not exceed 350,000 bales. Will sendown tell your fall of the could not exceed 350,000 hales. Will gentlemen tell me what is to be come of the enormous surplus of upwards of 1,700,000

The truth is, a home market is a wild and visionary conceit. Our productions must, for many generations of men, exceed our consumption. Our surplus must find a market at home or abroad. At home, legislation may compel it to the extent of our own consumption; but no further. Abroad, we can find no general market for our own manufactures, until we can give them Fourthly. By imposing duties mainly upon such im-orts only as come in conflict with our factory system. do, until our operatives are willing to work for bare subsistence, as is now the case in the workshops of Enstitution, for the purpose of disturbing the industry of rope. And this, thank God! they will never submit to, the country; pampering one interest at the expense of until our wild lands are all taken up, and made "to all the rest; exciting the hostility of foreign powers; and smile and blossom as the rose." A home market, adebreaking up that equality of right, without which, the quate to the consumption of our surplus, is then impracticable. Abroad we must seek and find one, or

THAT IT WILL PREVENT THE FLOW OF SPECIE FROM This reason is much used, and with great effect may be more than questioned—it may be denied. It depends upon the mutable opinions of men. The policy of to-day may be abandoned to-morrow. A home market, which springs into being under the control of The value of a home market, created by legislation, may be more than questioned—it may be denied. It depends upon the mutable opinions of men. The policy of to-day may be abandoned to-morrow. A home licy of to-day may be abandoned to-morrow. A home market, which springs into being under the operation of natural causes, cannot be too highly appreciated. It is but little subject to changes—is steady as the wants of man—and may be safely counted on, in the operations of labor and capital.

But any market created by law is a dear one—This truth is established by the law itself. You create a home market, by refusing to our people the privilege of buying in the cleapest market, and compelling them to buy what they need at higher prices, of a portion of our people, who, in consequence thereof, have been induced to engage in manufacturers, under a specious idea of a home market, prevail upon us to impose upon the foreign article a duty of twenty per cent—in consequence whereof, we get from our inanufacturer only eighty yards of cleth for a barrel of flour. The object is attained—we have a home market—but is it not a dear one?

but the nations of the earth are placed in a state of hostility to them, by the policy I am now considering.

The English would be glad to place bar iron in our seaports at two cents a pound. Yet, under the policy which goes for a home market, we are compelled to pay for the same strice from three and a half to five cents a pound.
